52. The National Wages and Productivity Commission (NWPC) coordinates with the Philippine Statistics Authority (PSA) for the generation of data necessary for minimum wage determination, such as needs of workers (e.g., poverty threshold, consumer price index (CPI)/inflation rates), employers' capacity to pay (e.g., average wages) and the requirements for socioeconomic development (e.g., gross regional domestic product or GRDP).

53. The Regional Tripartite Wages and Productivity Boards (RTWPBs) regularly review the region's socio-economic conditions and their impact on wages and incomes of workers and conduct consultations and public hearings with stakeholders and industry players.

54. As of May 2016, all minimum wages are equal to or higher than the regional poverty thresholds. Upon the release of new poverty estimates by the 3rd quarter of 2016, the NWPC and the RTWPBs will have to implement a new round of adjustments for minimum wages that will fall below the poverty thresholds.

14. Implementation of the two-tiered wage system and its coverage

57. Tier 1 (Mandatory Minimum Wage). To date, there are 81 minimum wage rates in the country, which are equal to or higher than poverty thresholds across regions. As of 15 June 2016, minimum wage rates across regions ranged from a high of P491 per day in the NCR to a low of Php225 per day in Region IV-B for non-agricultural workers. On the other hand, minimum wage rates ranged from a high of Php454 per day in NCR to a low of Php230 per day in Region IVB for agricultural workers.

58. Tier 2 (Productivity or Performance Based Incentive Scheme). As of June 2016, all the RTWPBs had issued at least one advisory for a growth or priority industry in the region. These industries include agriculture (plantation); agri-business; mining; manufacturing; transportation and storage facilities; tourism; hotels, restaurants and resorts; higher education institutions; and sardines (canning) industries.

Number of employees covered

59. The minimum wage policy covers employees in the private sector. The 2014 LFS showed that 58.0% of 38.651 million employed were wage and salary workers.

60. Of this number, 45% were employed in private establishments and 17.1 million were potentially covered by the minimum wage law. These included workers in private establishments (17.0 million) and family operated farm or business (0.1 million). In practice, those covered by the minimum wage were few due to the non-coverage of microenterprises by operation of the R.A. 9174 (BMBE law), exemption from minimum wage coverage upon application with the Regional Boards, and non-compliance.

61. The remaining 55% were workers in government (3.0 million) and private households (1.9 million), self-employed individuals without any paid employees

(10.9 million), employers in their own family-operated farms or businesses (1.2 million), and unpaid family workers (4.2 million).

16. Measures taken to narrow the large and widening gender pay gap in both public and private sectors and give, in law and in practice, the full interpretation of the principle of equal remuneration for men and women for work of equal value

62. Gender is never a factor in the determination of pay rates. The State adheres to “equal pay for equal work”. Standardization of compensation of government officials and employees is based on the nature of responsibilities and qualifications required for the positions.

63. The Constitution recognizes the role of women in nation-building and the fundamental equality of women and men before the law. It is a state policy to protect working women by providing safe and healthy working conditions, taking into consideration their maternal functions, among others.

64. Article 133 of the Labor Code prohibits discrimination “against any woman employee with respect to terms and conditions of employment solely on account of her sex.” Payment of a lesser compensation to a female employee as against a male employee for work of equal value is declared as an act of discrimination.

65. The Philippines has ratified two fundamental International Labour Organizations (ILO) Conventions—C100 (the Equal Remuneration Convention in December 1953), and C111 [Discrimination (Employment and Occupation) Convention in November 1960.

Government Service Insurance System (GSIS)

73. The rate of contribution of GSIS members depends on their status of membership. Regular members, together with the government agency to which they belong, are required to remit life and retirement premium contributions. Special members, together with the government agency to which they belong, are required to remit life insurance premiums only.

74. The principal benefit package of the GSIS consists of compulsory and optional life insurance, retirement, separation, disability, funeral, unemployment, and employee compensation benefits. Active GSIS members and active pensioners are entitled to a number of loan privileges.

75. GSIS members are classified into two types:

- Regular members are government employees receiving fixed monthly compensation while in the service of a government agency by virtue of an appointment or election regardless of status of appointment; and

114. Poverty reduction is a long-term program that requires uninterrupted growth over a reasonable length of time. The Philippines' high economic growth was preceded by alternating episodes of boom and bust. The consumption-driven nature of economic growth has also tended to limit its beneficial impact, primarily on employment and incomes. The Philippines has made inroads in addressing governance issues but continues to face challenges in terms of its economic performance and poverty issues.

Measures taken to reduce the poverty level

115. The President issued an EO streamlining government agencies that deal with poverty reduction. The government agencies concerned are given the task to evaluate existing poverty reduction programs, and if deemed necessary, formulate a more responsive set of programs complementing existing ones, channeling resources as necessary to reduce both the incidence and magnitude of poverty. The administration shall implement a human rights-based approach to development and governance.

116. Steps to ensure that the effects of policies will trickle down to the poor:

- Issuance by the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) of budget preparation guidelines that require departments and agencies to focus their allocation of the fiscal space to the 44 provinces identified to be contributing the most to the achievement of inclusive development, such as:

 - Category 2 - provinces with the highest poverty incidence or areas with the least opportunities for poverty alleviation; and
 - Category 3 -provinces or areas with highest risk when it comes to natural disasters and where economic and social services will be severely affected the most when calamity strikes;
- Use of targeting system such as the National Household Targeting System (NHTS) or Listahanan (trans. "list") of the DSWD for the CCTSP to ensure effective implementation. The same is also used by the Philhealth for its National Health Insurance Program (NHIP), Department of Health (DOH), DepEd, Commission on Higher Education (CHED), among others, in their respective program/ project implementation;
